No...No...Thank YOU very much! by Joe Dunn

First, Happy Thanksgiving to everybody. Time to chow down on the turkey and stuffing and watch a lot of football. Since I like to eat and watch football, I really enjoy this time of year.

I wrapped up my summer movie watching recently. There weren't as many reasons to be thankful as I'd like in this area. I mean, who felt that Avengers script go through? But the number of movies I saw that I enjoyed numbered higher this year than in the past three years combined. This trend might continue with Fall, which I have not seen but keep hearing good things about. I look for it to be a good year for animation studios. With the advent of 3D animation, where the computer models can be used over and over again, traditional animation may become a thought of time, combining cost with the future.

In comics, there are a few things to be thankful for, and I have to be one of the thankful for. Some of you may not realize that Antarctic Press owns a comic book store in San Antonio. We don't advertise the store very much in our publications or do special exclusives through it as an outlet, because our attitude has always been to support the industry in general and not to compete with our customers with exclusives and so forth. We do have an ANTARCTIC PRESS section in the store that takes up a five by eight section of slat wall.

I'm very thankful about the way the store has been doing lately. The place is great—it's big and spacious and we carry a wide variety of comics, toys, anime and other sundry items, more than most comic stores in the nation. It is estimated that there are about 4,000 comic stores in the United States. I am willing to bet there are at least 2,000 of these stores that are better managed and stocked than our store. But, for argument's sake, let's say only 1,000 are on par with or better than our store. While I love San Antonio it is probably not known as the mecca of anime or alternative comics. But we sell a lot of ANTARCTIC PRESS titles. Now what you consider to be a lot and what I consider a lot may differ but the number of AP books we sell is enough to make a difference in our bottom line. We are fortunate to have Mel Thompson's COMTRAC system for use in our store. We can track sales fairly easily. Gold Digger, for instance, sells 22 copies in our store every issue, and has for the last 12 issues. That I'm thankful for. But its print run is 5,000 copies. So if only 1000 stores offer equal or better selection than our store they would sell an average of only 5 copies each (assuming the other 3,000 stores are only 1/4 of GD at all). Now, in our store, we may have a little more promotion by way of our employees. We also know it is not a flash in the pan title because it's been around for so long. But we don't plaster AP stuff all over the store and make it our emphasis. So can any retailer or fan tell me who sells so well in our store compared to others? My opinion is that there is good product out there which just takes a little work to sell—maybe something as simple as telling your manga or video-game fans to check out Gold Digger. I'm thankful for every retailer out there who's like that, though I wish there were more of them.

Lastly on the joy front... we have to thank RENZER & COMPANY from whom we just obtained the KNIGHTS OF THE DINNER TABLE PVC license. This book is a great read for anybody who has been a gamer, especially role players. If you haven't tried it, pick up a copy at your local game or comic store. You'll be thankful you did.
